A tour of Sartell's dream school

by Dave DeMars news@thenewsleaders.com

Reaching Everybody!

The first tour of the new Sartell high school started in the parking lot of Oak Ridge Elementary School and lasted about an hour. To prepare for any future tours, be sure to bring ment and a sharp imagination. Right now the school is a world of girders and beams, conduit and concrete and metal studs that give a vague outline of what it will be when it is finished. But it was well worth the time and energy.

your curiosity, a sense of wonder-

Principal Brenda Steve guided one of three groups of about a dozen or so people around the outside campus area and through the partially constructed building that is scheduled to be finished in time for the 2019 fall opening.

"This is on time and on budget, so we should be moving in sometime in July," Steve announced as she led us down the path toward Sartell's version of the Taj Mahal.

The outside

Our tour path took us past partially finished softball and baseball fields. Slabs of concrete with conduit and pipe jutting into the air awaited the construction of walls for dugouts and warm-up areas. The field itself was green and lush and already seemed ready for the first game despite the recent heavy rains.

The base of the field was designed to drain heavy rain water away from the field and into drainage swales. The runoff will be reclaimed and treated so it can be re-used for irrigation when needed, Steve explained. Along with the baseball and softball fields were large expanses of open green areas. Buildings will be constructed for mowers and maintenance equipment, as well, because there will be lots of fields that will need mowing, Steve said.

Two veteran candidates vie for Stearns sheriff

by Mike Knaak editor@thenewsleaders.com

Two men, each with nearly three decades in law enforcement, are competing to be the first new sheriff elected in Stearns County in 16 years.

Dave Bentrud, Waite Park police chief, and Steve Soyka, a Stearns County Sheriff's Office sergeant, are on the ballot Nov. 6. One of them will replace Don Gudmundson who was appointed to fill out the term of Sheriff John Sanner after Sanner retired in 2017.

Both candidates stress the need for better cooperation and communication with county resi- Bentrud dents as well as city officials and police departments in sprawling Stearns County. With a population of more than 155,000 people, deputies patrol a county that stretches more than 60 miles from metro St. Cloud to the farms and fields at the western end of the county. The two candidates diverge over the value and Soyka significance of their considerable professional and academic experiences.

Bentrud, 60, is the "outside" candidate. Before serving as chief in Waite Park for 10 years, Bentrud was a sergeant in the St. Cloud Police Department. He touts his experience leading an entire department and his familiarity with management issues such as budgeting, technology and recruiting officers.

Soyka, 48, has spent his entire career in sheriff's departments, first as a deputy in Benton County and for the last 22 years in the Stearns County Sheriff's Office. Soyka emphasizes his experience with a sheriff's wider responsibilities such as running a jail, 911 dispatching and civil-process service.

At its regular Sept. 17 board meeting the Sartell-St. Stephen school board heard a good news report in the form of a comprehensive 2017-18 District Assessment Results. The report detailed results from the Northstar Ratings Every Student Succeeds Act, the Minnesota Comprehensive Assessments and the American College Testing. The report was presented by Kay Nelson, assistant superintendent of Learning Services, Marie Pangerl, district assessment coordinator, Michele Rogers, Early Childhood coordinator, and building principals.

After the presentation of the 2017-18 assessment results, there was further discussion on the continuous improvement goals for 2018-19.

Nelson's report covered the makeup of the student body (92 percent white) and the fact that only about 15 percent of students in the district required special education of some kind. Also, only 15 percent of students qualified for free or reduced lunch, and only 1.2 percent students had a language other than English as their primary language. High numbers in these areas tend to correlate strongly with lower overall achievement results.

The ESSA report covered five major areas; Academic Achievement, Academic Progress, English Language Proficiency, Graduation Rate, and Attendance Consistency.

Academic achievement was measured in two major areas; math and reading. In the area of math, students scored 19 percent higher than the state average; in

Assessment hearing set for properties along Pinecone

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

A public assessment hearing will take place starting at 6 p.m. Monday, Oct. 8 at Sartell City Hall for property owners proposed to be assessed along Pinecone Road N. – the stretch of that road that leads to the new high school.

The area includes property in Le Sauk Township, which contains 20 parcels that would not be currently assessed but would be subject to future assessments if and when they annex into the city. And there are three properties within the city proposed to be assessed currently. The area in question is the length along Pinecone Road between 15th Street N. and 35th Street N.

At the last city-council meeting, council members discussed the preliminary assessments at great length, wondering whether to waive parts of the planned assessments or to give some kind of discounts. What is to be assessed to property owners are partial costs of the road reconstruction project on Pinecone in that area, as well as city water-and-sewer improvements if the properties should ever be annexed into the city.

Council members Pat Lynch and Mike Chisum questioned whether or not homeowners on that stretch will benefit directly from the reconstructed and widened road. If not, why should they be assessed for part of its cost? The new school is the driving force behind the reconstructed road; the homeowners there just happen to be living on the road's edges, Lynch noted. How is "more traffic" a benefit to those neighbors?, Chisum mused.

Each homeowner would be assessed about $1,500 for road costs. said Sartell City Engineer Jon Halter. Road assessments to property owners comprise 35 percent of the total cost of a standard residential street - not the actual cost of the road work for the wider street being constructed on the route to the new high school.

The road there is currently 24 feet wide; it will be 45 feet wide. The council came to an informal consensus that assessments should not be waived for a number of reasons, including not wanting to set a bad precedent. The council, however, did seem to favor waiving a $450 annexation request fee and will consider a reduction of water and sewer access charges if any of the homes in that area annex to the city within a certain time period. Access charges are fees charged separately from the assessments at the time a home connects to city water and sewer.

Currently there are 23 properties subject to assessment or future assessments. They include one house now within the city limits (its preliminary assessment costs are $13,200), Celebration Lutheran Church (assessments of $30,600) and the new high school ($950,000 assessment to the school district). The other properties, 20 parcels, are now located in township territory along Pinecone Road.

Any current assessments would be payable over the course of a 15year period at 4.5-percent interest, said Sartell City Administrator Mary Deviovanni.

Construction Manager Report on Building Process: Construction Manager Lee

Gruen reported the project remains on track. The roofing is completed, athletic field seeding is continuing, pool drain and decks should be poured by the end of August and interior walls are currently ahead of schedule. The theater will be the next big completion. Irrigation pumps and ponds are working and the site was very successful in the recent heavy rains only showing minimal erosion.

Superintendent Report: Jeff Schwiebert, superintendent

Superintendent Schwiebert reported John Waletzko and Lee Gruen will be doing a pre-tour for safety and then tours of the new high school site will begin Monday with 55 staff members. Tours will begin for the public with the next group being the original community planning committee. The Sabre Spotlight is going out to the community and will highlight what the public will see for tours and the levy-for-learning presentation. Upcoming events include new teacher introductions on Wednesday, the all-staff breakfast next Tuesday, the levy-forlearning presentation for staff and Pinecone Road and 27th Street North will be open and have full access for the start of school on Sept. 4. No enrollment report this month since it's the start of the school year, but kindergarten enrollment is showing growth compared to the last four years.

for everything – softball, football, lacrosse, baseball, softball if we choose to," Steve said, "but what I am most excited about is being able to use this for our phy(s) ed green space."

The area is accessible from several directions, Steve explained. The area is easily reached from the locker-room areas. That is a change from the situation at the present high school where fields are somewhat removed from the school. Fields at the new school will allow for better supervision.

One member of the tour group asked what will become of the old high school once the new building is finished?

Steve explained it would be shut down for a year to allow for upgrades and modifications and then reopened in the fall of 2020 for use as a middle school.

Activity and programs

As we reached a back activity entrance of the building, Steve explained entrances will be locked during school hours, and teachers and coaches will need to have access cards for those entrances. During the evenings when athletes are arriving to compete, the entrance will be open. A parking lot on this side of the building will give athletes a place to park and access the building.

Just inside the activity entrance is the pool. It's larger than the pool in the present high school. The seating for fans has been roughed in and work continues on the pool. Across a hallway is an auxiliary gymnasium that will house a basketball area or two volleyball courts.

The main gym is much larger with three basketball areas with seating for 2,000 fans who will enter through the main doors of the high school.

"It's a bigger space with more space between our courts than in the present school," Steve said. "Curtains will divide the different playing areas, but we will be able to accommodate multiple courts with multiple needs."

The space in the main gym will have suspended wrestling mats that will be lowered when needed so they will not need to roll the mats up after each use.

Steve led us down the long hallway that leads to what will eventually be a commons area. She described a series of murals that will decorate the hallway and pointed out various areas for offices, locker rooms, a lab that will house health classrooms and certified nursing assistant labs.

"We hope to produce some CNAs out of our high school, and we are partnering with some organizations right now to make that happen, so we are thrilled about that," Steve said.

The CNA program is relatively new, but Steve said right now there is a shortage of CNAs and many students can't get in to nursing programs without a CNA license. So the school will be helping to fill a need in the community.

One area will serve as a training room and bio-medical area.

"We have a program right now where we partner with the Orthopedic Sports Center and we have physicians and therapists who come and work with our kids who want to be physical therapists," Steve said.

An adjacent area will house the fitness-training and weight room.

We headed down a hallway that eventually brought us to the commons and the ticketing area for entrance into sporting events in the main gymnasium. Immediately off the commons is the culinary area. It houses several kitchen areas. One is a general culinary area and the other will be set up to resemble a restaurant.

"Our students will be able to cook and serve the public or students or staff out of that space," Steve said. "They will get some real-life experience out of that, as well."

The commons is a multi-use area with a variety of venues occupying the space. Primarily it's an eating area that is much bigger than the present school. The commons houses the concession stand for sporting events, a school store, a student-run coffee shop and book cases.

Book cases will be placed strategically throughout the building in various areas without having a designated "library" as was common in schools in the past.

"We decided to disperse our books throughout the building," Steve said.

"If a student wants a book, they swipe their ID, they take their book, they put it under the beeper dealy and then they have the book. They check it back in in the same way. They don't have to go into a space that might be closed after hours. It's similar to what they have done at the community center."

The idea was to have books all around students and books in the classroom, which is why the new approach is being used.

Learning neighborhoods

There will be lots of glass walls allowing for observation of what is going on in the culinary areas and other areas. That will take some training and getting used to, Steve said, but it has worked in other systems, so she is optimistic it will work in Sartell.

Down the hallway just off the commons are the black-box areas. These are performance areas that can be used as classrooms, also referred to as learning studios. The focus in school is to encourage collaborative learning, hence the design of multiuse rooms and areas to allow for as much exploration of ideas and problems as possible.

"We can use this for lots of different things," Steve said, "for performances, for classes, a great space for astronomy because it will be totally dark."

Steve pointed out the various learning neighborhoods – tech ed, art, music, phy(s) ed, the office, science, English, math, foreign languages – all will be accessible and easily reached in a minute or two.

"Everything is really contained and together," said Steve, as she led us up a set of stairs to the upper level where science classes will be held.

Various areas were explained as being classrooms. Each is outfitted with lots of white boards for students to design and work out problems. Kids will even be able to write on the glass walls that allow for observation of classroom activity.

The Cloud Lab area will be set up for everything related to computers and digital. It will host web page design and cyber security, which are just two of the offerings in that area.

The learning neighborhoods are pretty much mirrors of one another with areas for small- and medium-group collaboration, labs for experimentation, regular learning studios and presentation areas. Steve estimates the average class size will be about 26. The present high school has about 1,200 students. She expects that number will grow to about 1,300 by the time the new school opens.

Sartell birthday bash set for Oct. 6

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

Live music, games for children, prizes and trolley rides that will transport riders back into history will all be part of the upcoming Sartell 111th birthday bash.

The event, sponsored by the Sartell Historical Society, will take place from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 6 at the Sartell Community Center.

Judy Morgan, member of the historical society, shared details of the "Happy Birthday, Sartell!" event with the Sartell Newsleader.

event with the Sartell Newsleader. The following will be components of the celebration:

From 10:30 a.m.-noon: Children's games with themes of Sartell's past, face-painting, kite-flying and story time.

From 12:30 p.m.-2 p.m.: Performance by the Riverside Jazz Band.

At 1 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Trolley rides will start during those times from the Sartell Community Center. The guided tour will visit the many historical sites in the city. But seating is limited so people should register to reserve a seat ahead of time. To register, call Ann at 320-253-4036, option 1; or email Ann at doyscher-domres@sartell. k12.mn.us.

All through the day there will be a display of historical artifacts that help tell the story of the people, places and traditions of Sartell's 100-plus years of history. There will be people available who are highly knowledgeable about aspects of Sartell history, including early economic bedrocks of DeZurik valve company, the Watab Paper Mill, the annual Winter Haven celebration, the early beginnings of the Sartell School District, the early days of the Sartell Fire Department and Police Department, the little-known McCann Ice Business (river ice), Sartell's founding families and much more. Historical videos and video interviews will also be available for viewing.

There will be birthday cake, cookies, coffee and punch served, and participants can register for door prizes.

"This will be a great opportunity to learn about Sartell as we celebrate an important milestone and support the Sartell Historical Society," Morgan said.

'Bark to Future' raises record amount

by Dennis Dalman news@thenewsleaders.com

The staff and friends of the Tri-County Humane Society are ecstatic about the resounding success of "Bark to the Future," the biggest annual fundraiser for the organization.

The walking event for both people and their pets came within a hair's breadth of its goal – $60,000, with $55,500 raised at last count, said Kate Kompas, volunteer and events coordinator for the TCHS.

"We were pleased as punch," she said. "It's a new record for us."

The $60,000 goal was the highest set in the 30-year history of the annual walkathon fundraiser. The money will be used for day-to-day general operations, Kompas noted. More fundraising efforts are ongoing with hopes of raising money for a TCHS shelter expansion project.

This year's event, which took place Sept. 8 once again at Wilson Park in St. Cloud, was dubbed "Bark to the Future," a nod to the popular 1980s movie "Back to the Future." In the park, there were many 1980s-themed games and the presence of two vintage DeLorean cars, like the one used in the famous movie.

Kompas noted the turnout for both people and dogs was exceptional this time, with 655 people participating along with 361 dogs. That's 200 more people than last year and 100 more dogs.

The goal this year was to raise $60,000 for the Tri-County Humane Society.

The TCHS adoption rate has steadily increased throughout the years and now hovers in the mid-90 percent range. In 2017, the organization, staffed mainly with volunteers, adopted out 2,746 animals. It placed 1,208 animals with foster-care volunteers, and it spayed/neutered 1,699 animals. It also hosted 45 spay/neuter clinics in the area, not to mention many educational outreach programs.

Senior Safety presentation set for Sept. 27

A Senior Safety Presentation will take place at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 27 at the Sartell Senior Center, in the Sartell Community Center.

All are welcome to attend.

The outreach presentation is sponsored by the Sartell Police Department in conjunction with the Sartell Senior Connection. At the meeting, police officers and the community-service officers will give seniors tips on how to remain safe in a number of ways.

At the last council meeting, Sartell Police Chief Jim Hughes said he wanted people to be aware that an earlier online announcement of the Senior Safety Presentation was incorrectly stated as Sept. 22 rather than the accurate date, Sept. 27.

After clearing the land, a concrete slab will allow outdoor dining behind River Boat Depot.

River Boat plans to add outdoor dining patio

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

The River Boat Depot bar/ restaurant in Sartell plans to add outdoor, river's-edge dining starting next spring.

The Sartell City Council approved an interim-use permit for that purpose at its last meeting. The request to the council was submitted by Brian Johnstone, co-owner of the business at 2 Riverside Drive.

The Sartell Planning Commission earlier voted to recommend approval by the council.

According to the interim-use permit application, Johnstone plans to lay a slab of concrete behind the River Boat Depot as early as this fall. The patio will be able to accommodate seven tables, two to four chairs per table, and up to River Boat Depot, which opened nearly 30 years ago, is located just south of Veterans Park on a bluff above the Mississippi River. From the patio area, there will be views of the old city bridge, the former paper-mill site across the river and the hydroelectric dam.

Business hours for the patio will be from 11 a.m.-10 p.m. It will be closed in the winter months.

Council announces meeting times

The Sartell City Council has scheduled a tax information meeting and re-scheduled a regular council meeting.

The council meeting for Nov. 12 falls on a holiday (Veterans' Day) so it will take place instead at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13.

Sheriff

The sheriff manages an annual budget of more than $20 million – half of it to operate the jail. The sheriff supervises more than 200 employees including deputies, dispatchers, correctional officers and support staff. The dispatch center answers more than a quarter-million phone calls a year. The jail booked 7,785 prisoners in 2017.

The county board will set the starting salary for the new sheriff in January. After that, the sheriff will be on the county's pay grid and he will get increases the same as other county employees. Gudmundson's pay was set at about $158,000 this year.

Bentrud calls the relationship between the sheriff's office and the county's 12 police departments "strained."

"I've been outside the agency and seeing how it interacts," Bentrud said. "I understand the issues and see how I can address them. There's a sense of disconnect east end vs. west end. The county line doesn't end just west of St. Joseph."

Soyka offers a similar observation. "When I started campaigning, I talked to city councils and police chiefs. They want to talk about how we are doing as a sheriff's office," Soyka said. He stressed direct communication with citizens and leading deputies who want to stop and visit with residents and business people. "Go in there, introduce yourself and say 'hi," Soyka says.

Both men have their own plans on how they would improve communication.

Soyka says he'd visit town board and city council meetings, continue the sheriff's office weekly newsletter, improve the website and personally conduct town-hall style meetings to answer questions.

"I want to be out there with the people," Soyka said.

Bentrud suggests a deputy or supervisor attend every township or city council meeting once or twice a year. Setting up substations in the west side of the county would allow citizens to meet deputies there to report crimes and complete paperwork instead of driving into St. Cloud. Years ago, there were substations in several western cities, but those facilities closed.

Bentrud also offered a technological solution of having deputies muster remotely via computer instead of driving into St. Cloud to begin their shifts.

Beyond the communication and cooperation issue, Bentrud and Soyka offer different visions of being sheriff.

Both men have degrees in criminal justice; Soyka graduated from St. Cloud State University in 1992 and Bentrud graduated from the University of St. Thomas in 1991 and later completed a master's at St. Cloud State in 1996.

Soyka's 27 years in law enforcement have all been in a sheriff's department, including getting his start as an Explorer. As a result, he says, he's familiar with responsibilities beyond patrol including the jail, communications and special services such as water patrol.

"I can take off on Day One," Soyka said.

Bentrud wants to promote more effective cooperation between the sheriff's office and local police departments.

One way to help city cops and police work together is to replace the 20-year-old records system to make sharing crime data easier and bring more focus to patrolling.

"We're after the same bad guys," Bentrud said. "There can't be a data island."

Right now, the St. Cloud Police Department and the sheriff's office work on two separate computer records systems. Bentrud wants a regional system to replace the current system he calls "archaic" that costs the city and county $300,000 per year to operate.

"New systems are more affordable and cheaper to maintain and allow us to be more focused on where we patrol and how we investigate," Bentrud said. "Stearns County is way too big for randomly driving around."

Soyka zeroed in on the personnel issue: recruiting deputies and correctional officers.

"We need to hire the right people who can adapt to different worlds" of addressing the diverse law enforcement issues in rural and urban areas of the county, Soyka said. "There are not as many people interested in law enforcement careers."

He wants to set up a recruitment team to visit schools with criminal-justice programs.

"I want to get our sheriff's office to a place where we have 400 people applying for jobs," Soyka said.

Both candidates said recruiting and retaining jail staff is a problem that affects employee morale, costs overtime and leads to employee burnout.

"The No. 1 issue is staffing of jail officers," Bentrud said.

Once hired, Soyka wants employees to find a "change in philosophy" with more teamwork and more interaction between deputies and correctional officers and supervisors.

"I'm here to listen, but to be honest with people," Soyka said. He wants employees to offer up what he calls "real-life solutions" to problems.

Soyka's leadership roles include team commander for Benton-Stearns SWAT and commander of the Central Minnesota Violent Offenders Task Force. The task force investigates narcotics, prostitution, gangs and other violent offenses. The team is made up of deputies from Stearns, Sherburne, Benton, Morrison and Todd counties as well as officers from Sartell, St. Cloud and Little Falls.

Bentrud has been instrumental in a multi-jurisdictional effort to stem sex trafficking that started about eight years ago. With Stearns County Attorney Janelle Kendall, Bentrud has spoken to public officials, educators, business people and advocates to "pull back the curtain" on the sex-trafficking problem.

"As a region we need to come together to address this," Bentrud said. "We were able to show it's a big deal." Funded by grants, the sex-trafficking task force has hired two investigators to focus on the crimes and started a shelter for women.

If Soyka is elected, he wants a more community-oriented sheriff's office that connects with the citizens.

"We need to let people know what we're doing," he said.

Bentrud says he enjoys being a problem-solver and he wants to address the issues of collaboration and cooperation.

This fall's election will determine the mission and strategies for at least the next four years.

Council ponders safety at pedestrian crossings

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

Some Sartell residents, worried about safety, have been requesting controlled pedestrian crossings in the city, both across Pinecone Road.

One is 15th Street S. with Pinecone Market Place and the other is Pinecone Central Boulevard by the entrance to Pinecone Central Park.

Sartell City Engineer Jon Halter outlined the citizen requests at the last city council meeting. Halter asked the council for directions to proceed or not to proceed with fixes for both those areas.

As for 15th Street S., Halter said traffic volume and speed on that portion of Pinecone Road would likely call for a substantial construction project, including perhaps even an overhead flashing device. Such major changes could cost a rough estimate of anywhere from $150,00 to $250,000, depending on which solution is preferred, according to Halter's written agenda comments to the council.

At the crossing at Pinecone Central Boulevard, there is a striped and signed crosswalk. A push-button activated flash warning light could be installed at a cost of between $30,000 to $40,000, or a sidewalk could be added to the west side of Pinecone Road stretching to Seventh Street. That crossing on Pinecone currently has a yellow flashing light that is activated during school hours, but Halter said a push-button activated flasher could be installed there, too, as well as at Pinecone Central Boulevard. Installation of a sidewalk with the two push-button activated flashers might cost between $80,000 and $100,000, Halter noted in his memo.

After further discussion, the council authorized Halter and city staff to do further study and cost estimates for improvements at the two crossings.

Christensen resigns after 10 years of service

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

Kyle Christensen, Sartell's chief building official, has announced he intends to resign his position because he has accept- Christensen ed a new job. Christensen has been chief building official for Sartell for the past 10 years. He worked with the building application process, as well as doing building inspections to ensure all buildings were compliant with city and state code requirements.

Sartell City Planner/Developer Anita Archambeau said Christensen accepted a job with the State of Minnesota. He plans to leave his Sartell job by mid-September.

The city council has authorized a hiring process to fill the job vacancy. At a meeting set for Sept. 19 (too late to meet publication deadline), an interim building official or officials may be appointed until a full-time replacement is found.

The job requires someone with an expertise in the administrative and technical aspects of building projects, including mechanical, plumbing, zoning and general code administration and enforcement.

In his 10 years with Sartell, Christensen has inspected thousands upon thousands of buildings.

Bentrud calls for new records management system

by Dennis Dalman

news@thenewsleaders.com

There is a vital need for all of the towns and cities in Stearns County to have coordinated access to a regional records-management system.

That's according to Sartell resident Dave Bentrud, who is the Waite Park police chief and a current candidate for Stearns County sheriff, competing against the other candidate, Steve Soyka. Bentrud has been in law enforcement for 26 years, 10 of them as Waite Park chief.

Bentrud told the Sartell City Council the current communications system for all the cities in the county is situated at the sheriff's department, with functions including dispatching, patrol, informational updates and more. The system, now 20 years old, is expensive, costing about $300,000 annually; and it is not very effective or efficient - so much so, said Bentrud, that it hinders prob-tions-management center could enhance networking among all entities in the county, Bentrud said, a kind of clearing house for information and instant updates. That kind of connective work, he said, is especially vital in light of the crimes related to sex trafficking and the increase of crimes and family and social problems related to mental-illness issues.

Bentrud told the council whether he wins or loses the bid for the Stearns County sheriff position, he is eager and willing to work with the city of Sartell and other towns and cities in the county to start developing a regional records-management system.

Because Bentrud spoke during the open forum guest-speaker portion of the city council meeting, council members - under open-forum rules - could not at that particular meeting reply or comment on the suggestions put forth by Bentrud.

Evergreen manager makes request at council

news@thenewsleaders.com

A fairly recent change in Sartell's rental ordinance has disappointed the manager and residents of the Evergreen Village Mobile Home Park in east Sartell.

Regional Property Manager Michelle Carlson spoke at the openforum portion of the last Sartell City Council meeting.

She said the revised ordinance changed the definition of manufactured-home (mobile home) housing to "single-family" housing. That, she said, is incorrect. Evergreen Village, she said, is an example of what's known as "multi-housing hybrid" more similar to apartment units than separate single-family homes.

ergreen lease a home site. The business is licensed by the state of Minnesota and the Minnesota Department of Health, she told the council.

She and the residents are unhappy the new designation as "single family" disqualifies Evergreen from the Crime-Free Housing Program. For more than 10 years, she said, residents of Evergreen were happy to have the crime-free program in place to keep the mobile home park site safe. Background checks were done on prospective residents, new residents were required to sign a crime-free lifestyle document and the Evergreen management and law enforcement worked together on safety issues as part of the Crime-Free Housing borhood has always been safety conscious, as evidenced by the last National Night Out, at which 75 residents participated in learning about safety issues, Carlson noted.

Evergreen Village has been owned for more than 30 years by the same company and is known as one of the finest mobile home neighborhoods in the area, Carlson said.

She asked the council to study and to reconsider the single-family designation in the rental ordinance and to "grandfather" in Evergreen so it can continue its participation in the crime-free program.

Mayor Sarah Jane Nicoll told Carlson city staff would contact her to address her request and to try to work out a solution.

Our View Census, redistricting questions are hidden election issues

The future of Minnesota's representation in the next decade will be decided with this fall's elections and with decisions being made now about how Census 2020 will be conducted.

How many members of Congress Minnesota will have and how their districts will be drawn will be determined by the census. The decennial count also affects drawing boundaries for other elected offices too, such as the legislature and county and city government.

The key census issue, should there be a citizen ship question, is being debated now. Who draws the lines for congressional and legislative districts will be decided by which party controls the governor's office and the legislation.

Although these issues are not on the ballot this fall, they will be decided by who gets elected.

Republicans have proposed a citizenship question on the census form. That question hasn't been asked since 1950 when it was followed by a question asking if the person was naturalized. The census is supposed to be a head count....how many people live here...not a count of citizens. The count is used to determine many government policies and funding as well as the number of congressional seats.

Because of national population growth and shifts, Minnesota is in danger of losing one of its eight congressional seats. There are 435 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and each state is allotted a portion of these seats based on the size of its population relative to the other states.

Opponents of the citizenship question also assert it might scare off legal immigrants and new citizens who are distrustful of government. That's a very legitimate fear considering Donald Trump's depor tation obsession.

The first of six potential lawsuits about the citizenship question is scheduled to start Nov. 5 in New York, the day before the general election. Three other cases are scheduled for January. With expected appeals, the legal battle could run right up to census time.

The citizenship question should not be on the 2020 form.

Closely linked to the census is redistricting. Based on the head count, governments draw boundaries for representation.

In Minnesota, the state legislature has constitutional responsibility for redistricting congressional districts, as well as Minnesota Senate and House districts. Local governments are responsible for redistricting other election districts. Those lines are drawn based on census data which shows how many people live where.

The Supreme Court set down rules for interpret ing the provisions on redistricting: equal population; contiguous and compact districts; no attempts to either congregate or divide minority groups; and keeping cities, towns and communities of interest together.

Under the Minnesota Constitution and past prac tices, the state Legislature - which in reality means the party in the majority — gets to decide where the lines are drawn. If there is partisan advantage to be taken, the majority party will take it. When power is divided, as it was during the last two census cycles, the court has had to step in and play mapmaker.

The website fivethirtyeight.com offers a look at what Minnesota's districts would look like without overt political interference.

In a perfect world, the lines would be drawn so no party has an unfair advantage. Several cases challenging district maps that unfairly favor one party or the other have reached the U.S. Supreme Court. The problem would be solved by each state appointing a bipartisan commission to draw the lines.

In a less-than-perfect world, if control of the governor's office and the legislature is split between parties, we'd end up with a bipartisan or judicial solution.

When you vote this fall, you are voting for more than candidates. You're voting for how Minnesota will be governed for the next decade.

Should sheriffs be elected or appointed? Twenty-seven men – yes, they've all been men - have served as Stearns County sheriff. On Nov. 6, Stearns County voters will elect the 28th sheriff.

In recent times they've been elected, but the job didn't start that way.

On March 3, 1855, three Stearns County commissioners appointed Luther B. Hammond as the county's first sheriff.

The three commissioners were appointed by territorial Gov. Willis A. Gorman, a Democrat. Gorman was appointed by President Franklin Pierce, also a Democrat.

Stearns County had its first appointed sheriff, three years before Minnesota became a state.

Hammond was a busy guy. He was also appointed an election judge. Three months later, on June 14, 1855, Hammond resigned when he and three other men were granted a license to run a ferry on the Mississippi River.

Henry Witzheimer replaced Hammond until Joseph Edelbrock was appointed in 1856.

During Edelbrock's tenure, Stearns County's first murder occurred on July 5, 1856. A fight with racial divisions about who should control a dance broke out. In the melee, Henry Becker was struck in the head. He died two weeks later and a man identified in William Bell Mitchell's "History of Stearns County" as "Clemens, the sailor" was charged.

What could go wrong? Lots.

Because Stearns County didn't

have a jail, Sheriff Edelbrock took the prisoner to the Hennepin County Jail. Clemens the sailor escaped and in Stearns County's first case of getting away with murder, he was not recaptured. But even though Hennepin County lost the prisoner, Hennepin County commissioners found the nerve to bill Stearns County for his room and board.

This past week, I interviewed the two men running this year for Stearns sheriff. Dave Bentrud and Steve Soyka offer voters years of law enforcement experience along with different visions for leading the sheriff's office.

Our conversations covered topics ranging from human relations to technology to budgeting in addition to basics of law enforcement.

Their impressive knowledge and experience reminded me that we haven't always elected sheriffs. During the interview, Bentrud and Soyka displayed a depth and breadth of knowledge required of few other elected officials. And despite the rapid turnover and early management issues in the 1850s, perhaps we should return to appointed sheriffs.

Most elected officials deal with setting policies and strategic goals. They don't need a deep education and experience to serve because they hire staff with special expertise to execute the policies.

Mayors hire city managers and police chiefs. School boards hire superintendents. Governors appoint experts in finance and transportation. Members of Congress hire staff with expertise in intelligence, defense and foreign affairs.

Just having good ideas for policy doesn't guarantee vou'd be a good sheriff. A sheriff needs academic training and experience on the street to do the job.

Since 1973, Minnesota Statutes allow a county to appoint an auditor, treasurer, sheriff or recorder if approved by voters in a referendum.

Maybe it's time to consider an appointed sheriff.

Electing a sheriff gives voters a voice in their government, a connection to law enforcement and a way to hold law enforcement directly accountable that is deeply rooted in Anglo-Saxon tradition.

The role of sheriff began in England and moved across the Atlantic to the colonies.

Americans continued the practice of electing sheriffs and affirmed the common-law powers of the sheriff, especially autonomy and independence. In 1878, Congress passed the Posse Comitatus Act, setting down the rules of law enforcement.

Legally, little has changed since then. So maybe it's time to return to the pre-statehood practice and take advantage of the provisions in the 1973 law to appoint a sheriff.

All work and no pay makes Jack a dull boy

I'm thinking of adding a third story on to my house. Since I have this column, allow me to solicit anyone who does such work. I'll also need a bathroom, so not just carpenters and architects, but plumbers too. It's a really great project, but I don't have any money. Instead, I'll let you work on my house and it'll be a great experience for you. I'll tell everyone about what a great job you did, so it'll be a strong sample of your work. Also, I'll need you to not just do the work, but provide all the supplies and materials. Maybe if I someday sell my house and there is enough profit made to cover all of my expenses, I might be able to pay you a percentage from that sale, but no guarantees.

Sounds ludicrous, doesn't it? Yet, I have witnessed much of society take this exact same attitude toward the creative professions. Societally, many are reluctant to pay for the arts, whether it's a logo or website for their business, entertainment or even the news. As a society, we are consuming more creative work now than ever before with the advent of digital content, e-readers and streaming channels.

Having worked as a creative professional for nigh on 20 years, I can't tell you how many times I've been offered a job that wouldn't pay me actual money, but promised to be a "great learning experience," or a "fantastic portfolio piece" and even "a labor of love" and "good exposure."

As acclaimed cartoonist Rich Stevens has said, "people die of exposure."

The creative professions require training and skill as much as any other, so why do people think they don't need to pay for the fruits of that labor? The people who do these jobs need to eat, pay bills and live. Creating art and content is a job. We don't ask any other profession to do their work for free, so why the creatives?

Recently, The Newsleaders has begun providing small daily news stories on its website for a nominal fee. These are stories that are unlikely to reach the print edition because of timeliness. We will also start providing more rich multi-media content on our site, such as more photo galleries and video. The Newsleaders has been a free news source for nearly all of its 30-year history, but that doesn't mean the people who create it work for free. This is our job. Just like you go to work, we come to work and make a newspaper. It's distributed to you for no cost because our business model so far has been to generate revenue solely through ad sales. All of us who work here do it to support our families just like you work to support yours. We want to provide you with more news more frequently, but we need to get paid to do that, hence our new subscription content.

It should be reiterated that all the usual free content is still free online; all the stories that appear in the paper, obituaries, blotter and public notices. Besides the more frequent daily news and multi-media content, subscribers also can download a PDF of the paper, something we haven't provided for nearly a year.

Work has value. Your work has value and so does mine. Art is a "real job" as much as being a teacher, lawyer or a factory worker is. Still, I'd love a third story on my house... no pay, but great exposure.

Rediscovering the thrill of driving at 19

This past weekend, I was able to head back home for the first time after moving into college almost a month ago. The time has really flown by, and it sometimes still feels odd to have been living in a new place for a while. I didn't bring a car with to campus, and so my dad picked me up outside the dorm before handing over the keys. Taking the wheel, I realized I hadn't driven in almost a month. That was a shocking realization, considering how constant driving has been to me since I turned 16.

It's been three years now since I obtained my driver's license, in September of 2015, and I remember that feeling of nervousness turned to excitement as the DVS tester announced I had passed the road test. Months of classes and logging driving hours had finally paid off, and that freedom of driving a car that people here in the United States always talk about was finally accessible to me.

This is not to say I was going to go crazy with this newfound privilege. Driving is a serious matter, especially considering the prevalence of car accidents. I made sure to always know where I was going, obey speed limits and stay aware when dealing with other drivers. My phone, as common sense dictates, would stay in my pocket.

Covering for safety, the possibilities and autonomy allowed by driving were endless. There was no more having to rely on a parent for pickup following an extracurricular activity after school. I could get a regular job and have a schedule of my own to follow to get there on time. I could run errands if I needed to without asking for someone to drive me there. It was a truly #### liberating feeling.

Since this is so ingrained into our culture, the driving age of 16 and ensuing freedom that results through the end of high school, I think we can almost take it for granted. When I visited Germany last summer, I experienced a very different world than what we have here. To start, their driving age is 18, and their hour and monetary commitments are much heavier than ours. This includes a firstaid course, required class time instruction, theory and road test, and an average cost of almost $2,000 U.S.

As a result, and since Germany is in many ways a more urbanized, compact country than us, many young people have little to no need for driver's licenses. Especially in the big cities, many options of public transportation are used instead. Many never get that "joy of the open road" early in life and some don't even purchase a car.

And that might be a growing trend here, as some studies have shown the number of high schoolers getting driver's licenses has fallen during the last few years. That's a statistic that really stood out to me, considering my own feelings about driving. I suppose some might say lazy young people may be blamed, but the requirements and cost of obtaining a license have gone up steadily throughout the years, and so it might no longer be practical for some, especially with alternatives growing in many places.

ing, ever since Henry Ford put in within reach of the masses with the Model T, is a quintessentially American tradition. It extends from our national character. We are ambitious, fun-loving and adventurous people, and so being able to go from place to place made us even more autonomous than before. Traditions such as road trips and camping were developed from those first cars, and have been a part of the national fabric ever since. So the next time you turn those keys into the ignition, be sure to remember your first experience behind the wheel, that thrill of newfound freedom. I do, and it's a memory I will always have with me.

Reader urges to vote Peterson for Sartell mayor

Glenn Persen, Sartell

Staying current, forward planning and being steady yet responsible defines David Peterson.

David has represented Sartell on the city council for almost 12 years and has seen a great deal of changes during that time. "Sartell is a growing community. People want to move here and raise their families and start businesses," Peterson said.

Rapid growth has created enormous challenges and listening to the concerns of our citizens and working responsibly to resolve these concerns is vital. In addition to serving Sartell, David also dedicates time - serving in the Army National Guard for nearly 19 years and currently a lieutenant colonel - to this great country we are all fortunate to call home. He has done tours in both Iraq and Afghanistan.

David is an attorney and works for the Veterans Administration in the HR department. He cherishes the time he spends with his wife Kristina and two children Devin and Lauren by being involved in sports, photography, tinkering with cars, shooting clay targets, boating and fishing, and taking an Adopt a Street in Sartell.

His concern for the city budget, schools and senior citizens is apparent.

David has the experience, dedication and proven leadership qualities required to be mayor of the city of Sartell. Please vote David Peterson for mayor on Nov. 6.

Change needed in District 13B, vote Everett

Barb Nelson, Sartell

If the political scene in Minnesota is ever going to change, then a change in the personal makeup of the legislature needs to change. Legislators on both sides feel what they are proposing and enacting is best for the people of Minnesota.

Unfortunately, the Republicans believe the following: eliminate health care for thousands by destroying the Affordable Care Act in favor of big insurance companies, which also includes the proposal to exclude people who have preexisting conditions; education - cutting $500 million from school funding, resulting in larger class sizes; transportation - taking miserly amounts of money from the general fund to fix a bloated and inadequate highway system; minimum wage - refusing to raise the minimum wage resulting in people having to work two and three jobs to make ends meet.

All these obstacles to progress and improvement for Minnesota have resulted in gridlock, back-biting, finger-pointing and a do-nothing legislature controlled by Republicans in the House and Senate.

A dramatic change is needed in Minnesota, and that can start here in House District 13B by electing Heidi Everett. Her campaign slogan is "Civility In Action." Civility in action means establishing affordable quality health care, fighting for livable wages, fully funding pre-K-12 education, preserving human rights, protecting Minnesota's natural resources and creating sustainable revenue for roads, bridges and water systems.

Former chief endorses Bentrud for county sheriff the St Cloud Police Department

Bob Ringstrom, St. Joseph

My name is Bob Ringstrom, retired Police Chief of Sartell. I strongly endorse Dave Bentrud to be elected as the Sheriff of Stearns County.

I first met Dave when he was a St. Cloud police patrol officer. He was promoted to sergeant in where I had the opportunity to coordinate with him professionally on criminal and social challenges common to both of our jurisdictions. As the police chief of Waite Park, his reputation is one of open honesty. Dave is highly principled and entirely above reproach. You can trust this guy to do the right thing.

Since his early childhood in Central Minnesota, Dave has been on a path of continuing personal and professional growth. He has performed well as a patrol officer, supervisor, trainer, coach, academic instructor, innovator and social advocate for crime victims as well as for the misdirected violators. As sheriff, Dave Bentrud will be able to bridge relationships across organizational and bureaucratic boundaries. He has polished his personal and professional talents across all spectrums and levels of educational achievement.

Join me in supporting Chief Dave Bentrud to be our Stearns County sheriff. His qualifications run deep with critical experience and professional character. Dave Bentrud has the traits of a proven leader and the capacity to serve Stearns County law enforcement at the highest level.

reading the score was 14 percent higher.

In the area of academic progress, students in the district again showed higher performance than state results on a student growth matrix; 2.59 compared with the state average of 2.13 in math, and 2.50 compared with the state average of 2.39. Only in the area of progress in English learner proficiency did the district score lower than state results.

In the area of graduation rates, the guidelines were to have a graduation rate of 90 percent with no student group having less than an 85 percent rate. The state average did not meet the guidelines (82.42 percent across the state). The Sartell-St. Stephen district greatly exceeded the guidelines with nearly 98 percent of students graduating on time after four years.

Consistency in attendance was lower than the guideline rate of 95 percent with no student group lower than 90 percent attendance. District 748 attendance scored at 91 percent with state results at 86 percent.

Two schools, Pine Meadow and Sartell Middle School received special recognition for being in the top 5 percent in Minnesota for progress made in various categories such as multi-racial math progress.

In the Minnesota Comprehensive Assessment results, the district scored significantly higher across the board with scores that were as much as 20 percent higher than state averages. These scores are compared grade by grade. In fifth grade mathematics for example the district scored 78.3 percent overall proficiency while the state average was 54.7 percent. In math, reading and science, the district scored higher than state averages.

The ACT is a test that measures college readiness of students about to graduate in four benchmark areas; math, reading, English and science. Overall, the district met all four areas with 52 percent of graduates considered ready for college.

The assessment results were followed by principals of the various schools detailing how each school had fared in meeting results of the 2017-18 Continuous Improvement Goals which were set within the district. At all levels, K-12, there were goals that had not been achieved and modifications were proposed so better results could be achieved in the the 2018-19 school year. The purpose of the continuous improvement goals is to strive for improvement. For example one goal was to have 100-percent graduation of all students. The likelihood of achieving the goal is low, but with changes in methodology and curriculum, improvements can be made and steps taken toward reaching the goal.

"If we keep writing goals and getting the same result, we need to make some changes," said Superintendent Jeff Schwiebert.

Other reports

Schwiebert reported an increase in enrollment for 2018-19 school year of about 118 students. This is not a final number however. The increase would give the district a bit more money in the budget for the coming year said Schwiebert. Schwiebert noted one curious occurrence is a large number of students coming to Sartell from out of state. Part of this might be due to a heated economy and people moving to areas where they can find work. One area is the St. Cloud- Sartell area.

Pine Meadow and the middle school have the biggest growth areas, Schwiebert said.

Project manager Lee Gruen reported construction of the new high-school has continued to show overall progress, and maintained the current schedule. With about 110 workers on site every day, progress toward a late July 2019 finish of construction remains a probability. The construction budget is still on pace with no unexpected costs incurred.

Action items

The board took the following actions:

• Approved a resolution for hiring new personnel;

• Approved the Minnesota Trust Resolution that will allow the district to have an additional option for investing district funds in order to ensure the best possible rate of return;

• Approved the revision of six board policies including 404-Employment Background Checks, 418-Drug-Free Workplace/Drug-Free School, 419-Tobacco-Free Environment, 420-Students And Employees With Sexually Transmitted Infections And Diseases And Certain Other Communicable Diseases And Infectious Conditions, 424-License Status, 427-Workload Limits For Certain Special-Education Teachers;

• Approved lease agreements with Pinecone Central Park St. Cloud Orthopedics Field (formerly Champion Field) and Pinecone Central Park Soccer Field;

• Approved preliminary 2018-19 levy. The levy 2018 is payable 2019 and is revenue for the 2019-2020 fiscal year.

Marie Pangerl, district assessment coordinator, leads the board through a discussion of the 2017-18 District Assessment Results.

Student Lauren Lindmeier makes her first presentation to the school board at the Sept. 17 meeting. Lindmeier, along with students Yash Hindka and Elijah Lawson, will be the student liaisons to the board keeping them abreast of the student events and happenings at each of the schools within the district.
